Jabotinsky Reinterment In Israel On July Ninth

JERUSALEM, (JCNS) — Vladimir (Zeev) Jabotinsky, leader of the Herut Party, is to be reinterred on July 9.

THE BEN HECHT ERA

Ben Hecht is more than just a name in American theater and literature. In the Jewish chronicles of our continent, the name of this unusually gifted writer will become synonymous with an era, with the times of trial and error of the early '40's. So far as Ben Hecht was concerned, the Jews of North America erred more than they tried during the fateful years when the destiny of our brethren overseas hung in the balance.

When Hitler began his war of extermination against the helpless Jews of Europe, Ben Hecht was a typical American writer and reporter dedicated to the success which came his way easily. He was then completely assimilated into American life, into Hollywood. This probably was his "undoing" in the eyes of some scribblers — who spent thousands upon thousands of public funds to fight Ben Hecht instead of fighting the Nazi danger.

Ben Hecht didn't know Jews. He was completely ignorant of the gamut of organized Jewish society, of its institutions, groups, organizations, politicians and, especially, some professionals who feared competition.

When he read the first reports about the Nazi atrocities, he then and there decided to fight for the dignity of the Jew, for his honor and for his very life.

That's how, at the very beginning of the '40's, he began exploring the Jewish scene, visited leaders of different organizations in an effort to mobilize public opinion. He dramatized the Jewish problem so that America should meet its challenge with its conscience.

He knew that — unless the conscience of America awakes, unless the Jews become "neurotic", forget business-as-usual and make a supreme sacrifice in the battle for Jewish survival — the Jews in Hitler's inferno were doomed.

Some leaders he met discouraged him. They told him to leave it to the establishment, to the organizations which would take care of everything; they didn't need Ben Hecht the Outsider to tell them how to save the Jews of Europe.

"What do you know about Jews, Ben? Go back to Hollywood and write good scripts. Leave the Jewish business to us. We are experienced, we are professionals."

Ben, then barely fifty, in the prime of life, and in a spirit of revulsion against those who would not read the writing on the wall, met a few impractical idealists from Europe and Israel — several boys from the Irgun.

The Irgun had sent a delegation to the United States. But most of the Jews in the leadership preferred what Bialik called chicken-dinner speeches to public engagement in a hard battle.

So the Irgun-boys and Ben Hecht met. And this meeting spelled out the destiny of Ben Hecht and his place in contemporary Jewish history.

He became an Irgun-man. With his connections, he helped establish first the Committee for a Jewish Army to fight Germany on the side of the Allies. The Committee to Save the Jews in Europe, then The American League for a Free Palestine and The Hebrew Liberation Movement. He boldly supported the idea of a Hebrew Committee of National Liberation, of a government in exile. He dared to accept, twenty years before Ben Gurion, the difference between Americans of Jewish faith (including American Zionists) and the Hebrews of Europe and Palestine to whom the Land of Israel was the only homeland and the only avenue of escape from Hitler.

He failed to a certain degree because, as is apparent now, had he succeeded in mobilizing powerful Jewish support as well as he had impressed non-Jews, perhaps Dr. Nahum Goldmann wouldn't have to say today that he, Goldmann, and the Jewish organizations he represents, erred during World War II — and that some of the millions who had perished could have been rescued.

What did Ben Hecht and his friends demand? Something which seems simple enough today, though it sounded revolutionary at the time. They wanted the Grand Alliance to recognize the Jewish people of Europe, singled out for annihilation by Hitler, as an allied nation. The Ben Hecht group asked that the Red Cross be empowered to investigate the situation of the Jews in Hitler's empire. They demanded the bombardment of Auschwitz.

Now everyone agrees that the destruction by Allied planes of the Auschwitz crematoria (especially in 1944), which took a long time to erect, would have saved two-million Hitler-victims.

But then, this too was revolutionary. Some professionals called him irresponsible, unrepresentative, because he had no mass organizations behind him. He and his friends claimed to speak only for the Jews in Hitler's Europe who appealed to the free world — in vain.

Was Ben Hecht always right? Didn't he err? His main weakness, and his strength, was, perhaps, the fact that he didn't know, as I said, the Jews' their foibles.

But again, "there is no righteous man on this earth who does good and will not sin."

Now the fighter is no more, the passions and polemics have dissipated. But the Ben Hecht era will remain one of the inspiring chapters in the annals of our people. So will he, hero of a great cause.

HATE MAIL CONTINUES

REVIVE RITUAL MURDER MYTH

Canadians Receive Streicher Sheet Via Her Majesty's Mail From U. S.

The latest piece of trash mailed in Canada is a photostatic copy of the original ritual murder-issue which the infamous Julius Streicher published in his notorious "Sturmer", in Nuremberg, May, 1934.

These copies are distributed in Canada in the original

German, with a few lines in English on the back page where is added a photograph of Julius Streicher, the ugliest of all Nazi criminals.

We are informed that Julius Streicher, executed on the orders of the International Tribunal, was a man of courage and fortitude in exposing the Jew-murder.

Charge Murder Conspiracy The headline (in German) reveals "the Jewish program of murder against the non-Jews." The cutline reads: "Through thousands of years, the Jew has been shedding the blood of the derers." A cartoon, also on front page, depicts two Jews one holding a blood-stained knife, the other, a bowl filled with blood. In the background are crosses in a cemetery. The cutline reads: "Through thousands of years, the Jew has been shedding the blood of the non-Jew in accordance with a secret, religious rite." A bannerline on the front page reads: "The Jews are our misfortune," which was the Nazi slogan.

A number of Canadians, most of them prominent in Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto, again have received hate literature last week, mailed directly from the so-called World Service, Box 3848, Fairview Station, Birmingham, Ala.

Despite the fact that the dissemination of hate literature has been discussed and criticized, it seems that (continued on page 7)

This is the reproduction of Streicher's obscene newspaper mailed this week to thousands of Canadians, including members of parliament. It was sent from Birmingham, Alabama. The headline reads "Jewish Murder Plan."

Official From Immigration Dept

OTTAWA WILL ADMIT MORE ALGERIAN JEWS, C.J.N. TOLD

By B. Morin, The Canadian Jewish News Correspondent

OTTAWA (Special to The Canadian Jewish News) — No special arrangements are contemplated to bring Algerian Jews now in France to Canada, The Canadian Jewish News learned this week. According to our information, the Department of Citizenship and Immigration has no specific program for the immigration of Algerians. A spokesman told The Canadian Jewish News that "Algerian Jews would be welcome immigrants to Canada but on exactly the same basis as any other prospective new Canadians."

The spokesman added: "The Algerian Jews would have to pass the government standard required from would-be immigrants — good health, good character and a suitable occupation." As the Algerians are Frenchmen by nationality "there are no quotas and no restrictions which apply to this group. They will be judged individually and each application will be treated individually."

Since the Algerian Jews now in France are Frenchmen, they would have to deal with our immigration offices in France. At present there is only one office in Paris which deals with immigration. But the Canadian government now is contemplating the opening of two additional offices in France. Not Specially Sought

The Canadian Jewish News also learned that on the part of the Canadian government there is no specific encouragement of any mass immigration of Algerians. Nor is there at this time any special recruiting discussed. But, because of the fact that this country wants more people, the Canadian immigration offices in France will probably suggest Canada as a good place for those Algerians who are thinking of emigrating overseas. Canada definitely wants more immigrants, we were told.

Desire Information It seems that Ottawa also would welcome more information from Jewish sources on the specific problem of Algerian Jews in France. At the moment there is very little particular knowledge about this group of potential immigrants.

Jews In Brazil Support Branco

RIO DE JANEIRO, (JCNS) — Brazilians are still living in a state of great tension as a result of the recent political developments in the country. The Jewish population, however, has not been affected by the events, and the activities of the community continue as before.

The Confederation of Jewish Communities in Brazil sent a cable to Marshal Castello Branco, the new President, congratulating him on his new post.

TO SPEAK IN TORONTO — The Hon. Paul Martin, Canada's Secretary for External Affairs, who will address the Beth Shalom Brotherhood at a dinner this coming Monday, April 27th. He will discuss Cyprus and Canada's role in the Middle East peace-keeping machinery.

Meanwhile, a number of Jewish Communists are among the thousands of Communists arrested by the new regime since the coup d'etat took place. "Unzer Shtime", a Communist Yiddish weekly newspaper, has ceased publication. So also have the non-Jewish dailies "Novos Rumos" and "A Voz Operaria", both Communist.

Mr. Samuel Wainer, a Jewish journalist, owner and editor of the well-known daily newspaper "Ultima Hora", who was known for his leftwing sympathies and for his support of former President Goulart, has asked for asylum at the Embassy of Chile to avoid being arrested. The Embassy granted Mr. Wainer's demand and he is now living there.

The general feeling here is that all Communist danger is over.

TROUBLE IN THE CITY

WARBURGS BATTLE FOR LIFE

London, (CJN) — Britain's merchant banking house of S. G. Warburg has played a prominent, usually winning, role in a well-publicized series of City battles, the Sunday telegraph reports. It now faces what amounts to civil war and is taking strenuous action to restore order on its home front before its differences with its old ally, Minerals Separation, come out into the open.

Minerals Separation (Minseps) is a highly successful $4 million investment trust and holding company, run with a firm hand by 76-year-old Mr. John Buchanan, an erstwhile financial director of Rio Tinto. In the last 10 years its earnings have increased steadily. The figures for 1963, due towards the end of next month, should again be excellent.

Minseps has long been regarded in the City as the Warburg holding company, for when the Warburg banking business was put into Mercury Securities, Warburgs were anxious to have the Mercury shares in firm hands. It was arranged that Minseps should take up 15 p.c. of the Mercury equity, which was for many years, Minseps' largest quoted holding. Mr. Siegmund Warburg and Mr. Owen Guard then joined Minseps' board while Mr. Buchanan became a Mercury director.

The two groups collaborated closely, Warburgs put interesting situations Minseps' way and in some cases Minseps was used as the vehicle for Warburg deals, such as those involving Vesper.

the Southampton boatbuilders, Hecht, Lewis and Kahn, the chemical and rubber merchants, and Standard Industrial Holdings.

In 1961-62 Minseps sold off about two thirds of its Mercury holding — wisely as it proved, for these were the years when Mercury's shares were at their best; in 1961 the price touched the equivalent of 90s. Now it is 48s.

The Sunday Telegraph reports that Minseps continued its sale of Mercury last year and that the report this year will show a further substantial reduction to its Mercury stake — a possible explanation of Mercury's disappointing share performance recently.

● The National Ballet of Canada, now at the O'Keefe Centre till Saturday, May 2nd, presents probably for the first time in history three internationally-famed prima ballerinas appearing together with a Canadian company: Marcia Haydee, Galina Samtsova and Lois Smith. All three have their own "showcase" pas de deux, with their own handsome partners in which they appear.

Choreographers also are from three countries: John Cranko, born in South Africa, was choreographer with Britain's Royal Ballet before being invited to head the Stuttgart State Theater Ballet three years ago; Brant Strate of Cardston, Alta., soloist dancer and assistant to artistic director Celia Franca, combined with painter Harold Town and composer Harry Somers on a new production, The House of Atreus, based on the ancient Greek legend of Electra; Zachary Solov was for fifteen years with the Metropolitan Opera as chief choreographer.

● Among authentic records, books in English, Hebrew and Yiddish, paintings and other works of art exhibited at the Jewish Public Library in commemoration of the 21st anniversary of the Resistance of the Warsaw Ghetto Fighters is the sculpture of Harry Ostrzeza, depicting the Nazi atrocities. Mr. Ostrzeza is a resident of Toronto since 1951. His special work of art measures 48" long, 31" deep and 8" high. Also on display are the paintings of Itzkowitz, another Torontonian, as photographed by B. Lensky.

● The Visual Arts Festival of Temple Sinai is holding its annual exhibition of arts and handicraft at the Temple. It will be on display till May 1st. Included are works in oil, water color paintings, sculpture and ceramics.

YUGO CHOIR IN LONDON

London, (JCMS) — The Zagreb Jewish Choir of Yugoslavia, which is participating this weekend in the residential and public sessions of the Jewish Choirs Festival (sponsored by the "Jewish Chronicle"), is the first foreign choir to appear since the festival was inaugurated five years ago.

Although most of the choir's 60 members (25 men, 35 women) are students of Jewish origin, there are some who are non-Jews and who joined it at its inception hoping thereby to express their friendliness towards Jews.

The choir was formed in 1953 with 25 members. Since then, under its conductor, Mr. Emil Cossetto, it has appeared three times at the World Festival of Jewish Choirs — the Zimriya — in Israel and has scored successes at concerts in France, Belgium and Italy. It participates regularly in cultural activities in Zagreb and performs at Chanukah and Purim in many Yugoslav communities.

HUMAN RELATIONS

The Martyr Role

DR. ROSE N. FRANZBLAU

QUESTION: My close friend whom I have known for many years and have a high regard for, has a problem with his wife.

I know he is decent, intelligent and reasonable, but she is persistent with unreasonable demands. His income is moderate and limited and he extends himself to provide for the family, including two grown children.

On the other hand, she has a job with an income and keeps it all for herself. He sacrifices himself, hasn't bought a suit for years, hoping to promote harmony. He has tried every kind of approach, but cannot correct this condition.

ANSWER: Any situation where money is used as an instrument of emotional exchange or as a weapon with which to make demands on the other, is created by both of the pair.

When a man gives his wife everything she wants, unstintingly, even when the result is that he has very little left for himself, it may be his way of making up to her for some lack in himself for some need in her that he is not satisfying.

It may also be to make up for a feeling of inferiority about himself and to cover his wife's disappointment in him. Not doing too well financially, he gives her everything he has to show how good he is and how much he loves her. This gives him the status of being a generous man even when what he has to give isn't much.

Sometimes, such a husband will give privately to his wife and family, and then complain publicly to others about the demands and impositions his family makes on him. What he wants from them is not advice on how to bring about a change in the family's financial operations, but rather, the sympathy and appreciation that he feels he doesn't get enough of at home.

By portraying himself as a long-suffering martyr, who gives his all, but gets nothing in return, he creates an image of a beneficent figure. When he goes without things that he really needs, the person is punishing himself. But by creating guilt in his wife, the very one to whom he gives so generously, he is also punishing her.

That your friend does so much for his family at such sacrifice, indicates that he likes to do things the hard way. It gives him the sense of power he needs to be the sole support of the home. Challenged by the fact that his wife works, it makes him feel the head of the household when she doesn't contribute financially to its support. But by not contributing anything to the household, she is acting like a completely dependent person, despite any protests that she doesn't want to be one. That not only his wife, but his two married children also make undue demands on him, confirms the fact that he likes having people call on him for help.

If your friend really felt that it was too much, he would deny some of his family's requests. Even though it is annoying at times, he enjoys it more than he can admit to himself or to you. He can afford the new suit that he hasn't gotten for years. But when the old suit becomes the hair-shirt of martyrdom, he feels properly dressed for the role he wants to play.

When he wants to talk to you, he wants you to listen. Any comments or suggestions as to a change in his behavior might well be seen as a criticism of him. You may be sure then, that this is the life he wants. To be happier, he has to admit it to himself.

ROTHSCHILD INVESTS IN AUSTRIA

Vienna, (JCNS) — Talks begun with Mr. Edmund de Rothschild in London a few weeks ago, during the visit by Dr. Bruno Pittermann, the Austrian Vice-Chancellor, were successfully concluded here last week.

Mr. de Rothschild has visited Vienna and signed agreements for investment in Austrian industry, especially public enterprises, by the Rothschild banking firm.

After the signing of the agreements, Dr. Pittermann gave a luncheon party in honour of Mr. de Rothschild.

STALIN'S JEW

KAGANOVICH'S SAD OLD AGE

Moscow's official admission that Lazar Kaganovich had been expelled from the Soviet Communist Party, marks the end of the long political career of one of Russia's very few remaining Jewish leading figures.

Kaganovich, one of the pillars of the party, did more than anyone else to help Mr. Khrushchev rise to his present position of power, and more than once saved him from political disgrace and perhaps worse.

According to the Moscow report, Lazar Kaganovich was expelled from the Communist Party together with Viacheslav Molotov, the former Foreign Minister, and Georgi Malenkov, Stalin's successor.

For more than 20 years, Kaganovich acted as Stalin's right-hand man. More than anyone else in the Soviet Government he was responsible for building up the country's industry, transport and administrative system except the police.

Even when Stalin began his purge of Jewish Communists, he left Kaganovich alone. There were two reasons for this. First, the Soviet dictator was certain of Kaganovich's loyalty to the Communist ideal and to Stalin himself as its principal interpreter and leader.

Secondly, Stalin did not want to lose Kaganovich's great talents as an organizer and improviser. Polish Communists with an intimate knowledge of Kremlin affairs say that Stalin felt a sense of obligation towards his Jewish friend and aide that lasted until the end of his days.

Some maintain that Stalin was dissuaded from deporting hundreds of thousands of Moscow Jews at the time of the so-called "Doctors' Plot" only by Kaganovich.

Mr. Khrushchev has much to thank Kaganovich for. Had it not been for the Jewish Minister, today's ruler of Russia might well have been dismissed from the Communist Party and even executed, soon after he was appointed local party secretary in the Ukraine.

A special commission investigated a harvest failure in the Ukraine, due mainly to mismanagement by Mr. Khrushchev. Its report, originally intended for Stalin, was sent to Kaganovich. Mr. Khrushchev was replaced — but that was all. Stalin's action would have been much harsher.

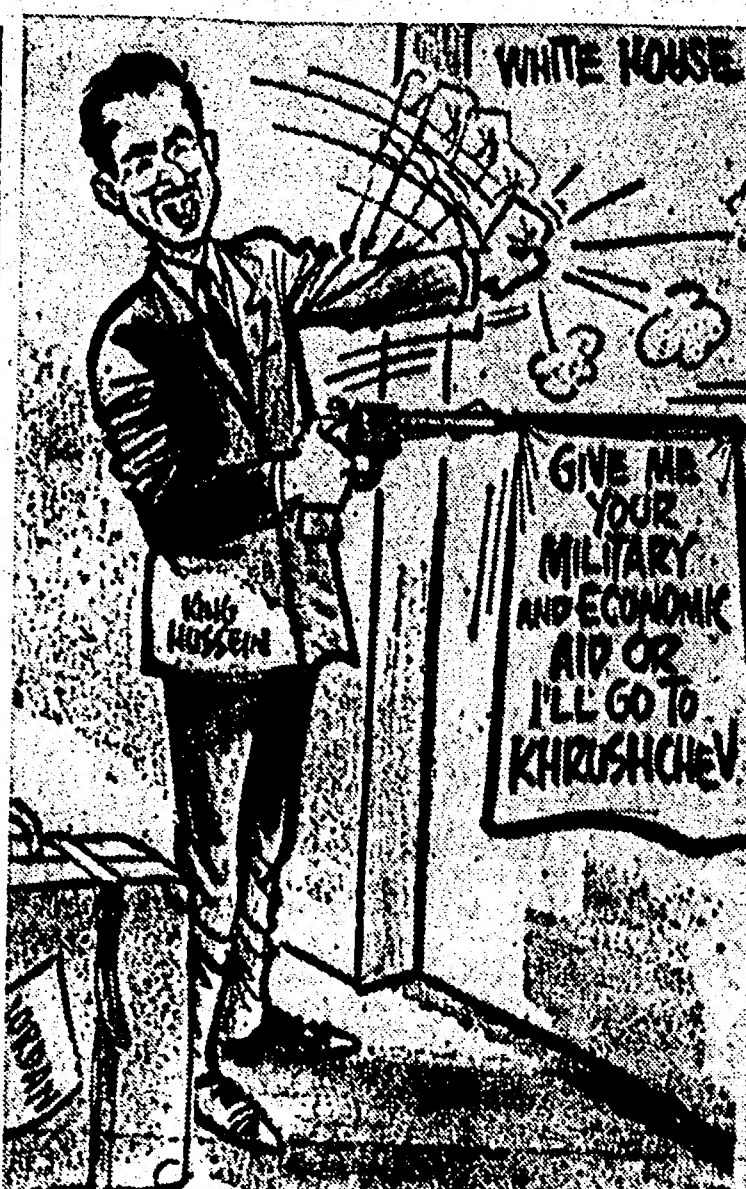

In 1933 Kaganovich was appointed Minister of Transport, and persuaded Stalin to give Khrushchev the job he was vacating, regional secretary. Five years later Kaganovich was instrumental in having Khrushchev appointed first secretary of the central committee of the Ukrainian Communist Party, in Kiev.

It was at this time that Khrushchev said: "I have a warm friend in Moscow — Lazar Kaganovich." In 1948, when Mr. Khrushchev was losing the battle with Malenkov for power under Stalin and felt himself in danger, it was to Kaganovich that he turned for help and protection. He was not disappointed.

When Stalin died in 1953 and Malenkov succeeded him, Kaganovich helped Mr. Khrushchev to overcome Malenkov's efforts to keep all power out of Mr. Khrushchev's hands, and Malenkov was ousted. First Bulganin, then Khrushchev, stepped into his shoes.

Only four years later, came the beginning of the end for Kaganovich. In the summer of 1957, Khrushchev began attacking and vilifying Molotov and Malenkov for their "anti-Party" line. His somewhat milder denunciations of Kaganovich soon developed into something worse, and before long, "Pravda" and "Izvestia" were attacking all three men and labelling them "one group of culprits."

Now, stripped of his Communist Party membership and his job, Kaganovich has had to retire on a small State pension. His flat in Moscow has been taken over by a party official. His fate — ruin at the hands of his protegee — shows that, for Khrushchev, friends are expendable when they can no longer be used for his own ends.

Talk Of The Town

Montrealers who follow closely the developments in the French Canadian press have been impressed by the extremely sympathetic tone regarding Jews and Israel among French Canadians. Some regret that they do not read French, for the French language press apparently has discovered an affinity between Jews and French Canadians.

Whether one does or does not agree with Separatism is irrelevant. Yet it certainly is interesting to note how one of the Separatists' organs, L'Indépendance, considers Israel an example to follow by French Canadians. In its last issue, this monthly, under the byline of Jean-Paul De Lagrave, states in a headline: "What Israel has done, Quebec can do also."

M. De Lagrave is deeply committed to Separatism. Without taking any position on the issue of Separatism itself (which, I believe, is the problem of the French Canadians themselves), I cannot but be impressed by some moving expressions in the writer's article.

Says M. De Lagrave, i.e.: "The recent realization by a nation of such a noble dream as is ours could serve as an encouragement to make us continue without letting up on our work."

"This took place sixteen years ago."

"This was a small people, despised. It even had abandoned its language but people refused to die."

"But the word, impossible, does not exist in Hebrew."

The writer then continues with some comparisons between the Jews and French Canadians.

As I've said, one may or may not agree with some conclusions. However, one cannot escape the passion for freedom and human dignity which is at the basis of this writing.

Speaking of comments on Jewish issues in the French Canadian press, I wish to

ESHKOL GOES SHOPPING IN THE U.S. CAPITAL

by RICHARD YAFFE

Although the visit to America of Mr. Levi Eshkol, Israel's Premier, is still some six weeks off, the guessing game is already well under way: What, exactly, is he after here? The answer appears to be, simply: Israel's security.

This is not what Israeli quarters here are saying. According to them, "the whole gamut" of Israeli-American relations will be explored. They add that, since Mr. Eshkol has never met Mr. Johnson at the head-of-State level, it is time he did, so as to establish a personal relationship.

All true, of course. There are many facets to the relations between the two countries. One is financial, and the problem is pressing.

Trouble with Congress

The White House and State Department are having trouble with Congress over a Foreign Aid Bill to give adequate support overseas, and it looks as though they are not going to get it. They will, therefore, have to make do with what they get, and they are going to spend it carefully, where it counts most.

Israel will be low on the list of allocations, it's now clear. Washington feels that Israel is safely in the Western camp, and that dollars are not needed to keep her there. But the main argument is that a State with an average annual income of $1,000

(about L. 357) per person is hardly a have-not nation, especially if it also has a foreign exchange surplus as large as Israel's.

But Israel's foreign exchange position is illusory. Israel is, in fact, very much in debt, and she has big commitments to absorb large numbers of immigrants and to maintain her defences.

No other State has had to carry such a back-breaking double burden. And on top of it, German reparations are almost at an end, and fund-raising campaigns in the Diaspora are yielding less and less.

The fiscal problem, therefore, is pressing, but it can be dealt with somehow. Not so with security.

Hawk an exception

Israel is no longer as sanguine as she was that the Arab States will not attack her.

It would be too easy to say that Mr. Eshkol's main purpose is to obtain weapons. The Hawk missile deal was an exception, not an augury of a new practice on America's part.

President Johnson may not show the same independent spirit and the ability to break new ground as his predecessor. More specifically, he will want firm guarantees that the balance of power will be maintained in the Middle East. This was Mr. Kennedy's policy, and the Hawk deal was part of it.

great faith in Israel's future. And did not the speech of the Deputy Under-Secretary of State, Mr. Alexis Johnson, stating that the U.S.A. would not tolerate aggression in the Middle East, constitute an open pledge to come to Israel's aid should the Arab make war?

The President's statement of nuclear desalinization was more than welcomed. But important as it is, for the present, it is pie in the sky: it will be many years before practical results will come of it.

As for Mr. Alexis Johnson's statement, it was what the State Department and the White House have been telling the Israeli privately all the time.

But it did not have the impact it would have had if President Johnson or Mr. Rusk had made it in public. It is far from formal guarantees of Middle Eastern borders, and farther still from the mutual defence agreement Israel has wanted all along and will not get. And Mr. Eshkol will not press for it, if indeed it mentions it at all.

What he will probably try to do is pin down America's commitment to peace in the region, and particularly to Israel's safety. More specifically, he will want firm guarantees that the balance of power will be maintained in the Middle East. This was Mr. Kennedy's policy, and the Hawk deal was part of it.

Question of credits

This would mean the supply of weapons; mainly the money to get them. America could make important credits available.

Mr. Eshkol's deputy, Mr. Eban, has laid the groundwork for this visit. The agenda has been worked out and the appointment made with the officials in Washington.

The head of the American desk at the Israeli Foreign Ministry, Mr. Shimon Arad, has come to the advance man for the Prime Minister, and Mr. Meyer Feldman, President Johnson's adviser, has been in Israel to iron out final details.

It will be a "working visit," Mr. Eban has said. And from indications here, it promises to be a successful one.

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

THE WAYS OF THE LAND OF EGYPT

The Lord said to Moses, "Speak to the people of Israel and tell them that in the ways of the land of Egypt they shall not go. (Leviticus 18, 1-2).

Although we read these words in the Bible each year, most of us have only a very hazy idea of what they really mean. What exactly were the ways of the land of Egypt against which the Bible warned so vehemently? In order fully to understand this injunction, we must go to the museums and examine some of the relics and artifacts that have come down to us from ancient Egypt.

The government of Egypt recently loaned out a small part of its collection of ancient art for exhibit in the museums of some cities in Europe and America. The exhibit was called "The Treasures of King Tut", and was a remarkable collection of rare and precious art objects.

It included a delicately carved dagger, found in the tomb of the king, that was evidently intended for his protection as he made his way through the netherworld. There, too, was a basket made of the finest filigree silver, in which the king was to bring gifts to bribe the guards at the gates of the world beyond. A crown and a ring and a bracelet were also there, all made of the finest jewels. Each of these art objects must have taken many months of skilled labour to fashion.

The reaction of a sensitive Jew to such a collection can only be to exclaim: What a waste! Piling up of treasures in the grave is a futile and a foolish way in which to meet death. Our tradition teaches that the only baggage which is necessary or possible to take into the world beyond is a good name and a record of good deeds. Nothing more is needed, Nothing less will help.

Ancient Egyptian civilisation was based upon the worship of the dead. The entire economy was ordered around the constructions of mausoleums for the magnification of the memory of the dead. Not only vast sums of money but also the blood and sweat of thousands of slaves went into the making of the pyramids and the mausoleums.

It was against this sinful and superstitious waste that Moses and the Israelites rebelled. This is why when they left Egypt they were warned never to go back to Egypt or to the worship of the dead which is the essence of the way of the land of Egypt.

Now the pyramids gather dust in silence and ancient Egypt is no more, but "the ways of the land of Egypt" are still very much with us. Whenever people build elaborate monuments to the dead instead of giving charity to the poor, we are practising the ways of the land of Egypt. Whenever people purchase costly coffins of bronze instead of wooden caskets, we are following the ways of Egypt. Whenever a culture spends more on tombstones than on medical research, we are following the ways of Egypt. Whenever people indulge in a garish display of luxury at a funeral instead of following our tradition's teaching that simplicity is the way to honour the dead, then we are going in the ways of Egypt.

In recent months, rabbis and ministers in England and in America have been issuing a call back to the principles of simplicity, realism, and equality in the time of death. This call is a continuation of the warning in this week's portion of the Bible: "In the ways of the land of Egypt, they shall not go."

● The Beatles are living in fear of the tax collector. Any day now they expect the fateful envelope marked, "On Her Majesty's Service," to drop through the mail slot with the bite on the estimated 1,000,000 pounds ($2,800,000) they have made to date.

Under British tax regulations, John, Paul, George and Ringo pay no tax until they have completed 18 months in the business. The period now is over.

But their biggest expense is Brian Epstein, their manager, who takes 25 percent of their earnings.

● In the first step of a scheme to introduce Hebrew dubbing, Gary Cooper and Snow White shortly will speak Hebrew in the movies in Israel. Urged by Mr. Asher Hirschberg, the government official in charge of the film industry, it was endorsed in principle lately by the Israel Film Council. High Noon, Snow White, Bambi and the French film, Give Me Ten Desperate Men, will be the first dubbed into Hebrew.

● The Habimah, which has just returned to Israel from its North American tour, will begin work on Hochhuth's The Deputy.

● In Israel, My Fair Lady is playing to capacity-filled audiences.

● Barbara Streisand, star of Funny Girl, was a waitress not long ago in a Brooklyn Chinese restaurant. It was a part-time job between her 12th and 16th birthdays. She started out baby-sitting for the bosses and worked up to waitress and cashier. She also was an usherette, so she could see the shows. "I used to put my hand up to my face and turn a side when I led people down the aisle. I was thinking, 'This could be embarrassing."

One day I'll be a star and people will be remembering, 'This girl once showed me to my seat.'"

And that's exactly what has happened now. Ethel Merman, Lauren Bacall, Jason Robards and others pronounced her the greatest gal to hit Broadway since the Fanny Brice she portrays. Sophie Tucker even said: "She's exactly like Fanny Brice... she has the mannerisms... she even looks like her... she never saw her... she's a natural... she can also make you laugh and cry just like Fanny could. What a star."

● Alan King is flying to London in June just to play a one-nighter—and it's a benefit.

● Charlie Chaplin turned 75 aboard a train as he and his wife, Oona, 33, headed from their villa beside Lake Geneva for Milan and the opera. A clown from a Swiss circus somehow found out about his last-minute change in plans and appeared in their train compartment with a little birthday cake.

"You are a bad boy," said Chaplin. "I thought we had fooled you all. But you found me." Then he reflected: "I am feeling young. But I am very old today."

● After the Hamlet premiere in New York, Michael Wilding was at the party sitting next to his ex-wife, Elizabeth Taylor. Wilding then accompanied a group to a nightclub where he sat next to his most recent ex-wife, Susan Wilding. Wilding revealed that all four of Miss Taylor's children—their two sons, Mike Todd's daughter—are living at his California home.

● Lou Jacobi, Torontonian, recently turned New Yorker, is playing a show-business giant in the new Carol Burnett musical, Fade Out — Fade In. Jacobi told a story about another show-business giant, Dillingham. The latter was a pallbearer at the funeral of the fabulous Houdini, who'd often escaped from safes into which he was locked and tossed into the river.

As the pallbearers carried Houdini's coffin to its final resting place, Dillingham whispered to the others:

For The Record

Dear Editor,
The following is an excerpt from Hansard, House of Commons Debates, for Thursday, April 1, 1964, at page 1952, of a Point of Privilege raised by the House of Commons by Dr. Stanley Haidasz, M.P., Parliamentary Secretary to the Secretary of State for External Affairs:

"POINT OF PRIVILEGE
Mr. Haidasz — Anniversary of Massacre of Warsaw Ghetto.
On the orders of the day: Mr. Stanley Haidasz (Parkdale): Mr. Speaker, on a point of special privilege, in unison with voices in other democratic parliaments of the world, I would like to bring to the attention of this house that today certain Canadian groups across Canada are commemorating the sad anniversary of the courageous uprising of the people of the Warsaw ghetto. It is to be stressed that six million Jews, men, women and children, lost their lives almost 20 years ago at the hands of nazi persecutors. It is hoped that the Canadian government will do everything in its power in the future to prevent such massacres and attempts at genocide."

A Reader.

NO PROTEST

AMSTERDAM, (JCNS) — The Dutch premiere of Rolf Hochhuth's play "The Representative" took place in Rotterdam at the "Nieuw Rotterdam Toneel". No demonstrations or protest of any kind were staged.

The presentation avoided any sensational effects and envisaged the play not so much as an indictment of Pope Pius XII as an appeal to the conscience of each human being, if placed in a similar position of responsibility.

The hall was sold out long in advance. There was little applause, because most of the audience was too affected by the play to react outwardly.

to George for giving up a lot to be here tonight, although I don't know her name."

● Paul Newman's father, Arthur S. Newman, was Jewish. His mother was Christian.

● Claire Bloom, actress, was born in London. Her father's business kept the family traveling all over the world. Her acting talent became evident when she was twelve years old and living in New York. Charlie Chaplin signed her and brought her to Hollywood to appear in his film, Limelight. She is married to Rod Steiger. They have a daughter, Ann, who will be four years old soon.

● Edward G. Robinson was born in Bucharest, Rumania. His family came to America and became naturalized citizens when he was ten years old. Though money was never plentiful, all five sons became professionals—four brothers now are lawyers or doctors. Edward G. missed his goal to become a rabbi.

● William Shatner was born in Montreal. While preparing to join his father's clothing manufacturing firm, he succumbed to the acting bug.

● Howard DeSilva was born in Cleveland, Ohio, son of Benjamin and Bertha Silverblatt. He graduated from Carnegie Tech and worked briefly as a steel worker. In 1929 he made his first New York stage appearance.

● The most Jewish role, Leah, in the most Jewish play, The Dybbuk, in the most Jewish theater, Israel's national theater Habimah, went to Eva Leon, popular Viennese actress who was born a Catholic. As Eva Kerbler, she married a Swiss Jew and accepted the Jewish faith. She divorced her husband, became involved in Jewish ties, visited Israel, liked it, settled there, learned Hebrew and changed her German sounding name to the Jewish name, Leon.

● For years Phil Silvers, who rose from burlesque to stardom, was haunted by the thought that Laurence Olivier was a star. "I wanted to be a star, and had to convince myself I was as good as Olivier." He convinced himself he was better than Olivier: "Shakespeare wrote his act, but I ad lib."

● The Kaye Sisters originated the Beatle hairdo in London, but gave it up when the Beatles took it over.

● Jayne Mansfield, according to reliable sources, announced she would not star in the planned Rex Carlton feature, Johnny Morder, to be filmed in Tel Aviv, because it would hurt her "standing in the Arab countries and place her under boycott."

● Jack Garfield, film director, is in Tel Aviv, touring some of the locations used presently by French and American film companies.

● In Tel Aviv, Zizi Jeanmaire received only mild reviews. But her Yves Saint-Laurent costumes stole the show.

● Many-a-heart is aching in Toronto. Of all times to pick to come here, the Beatles had to choose Labor Day, which falls on the first day of Rosh Hashana. Loads of youngsters won't be able to see their favorite entertainers; they don't travel on the Jewish New Year.

HEBREW UNIVERSITY STUDENTS GATHER BOOKS FOR BASUTOLAND. Following an appeal from students in Basutoland for text books, the Israel National Union of Students, with the cooperation of the Hebrew University Students' Union, has embarked on a campaign to raise new or used (mainly scientific) text books.

Due to insufficient opportunity for study in South Africa, many South African students go to the British Protectorate of Basutoland, and this has resulted in a serious shortage of text books. This month, the Books for Basutoland campaign was initiated at the Hebrew University with a large meeting in the Wise Auditorium, addressed by Professor David Ayalon, Director of the University's Institute of Asian and African Studies.

Shapiro, advertisement convener, and Mrs. H. Pike, donor chairman.

A Little Bit Lively
By RUTHIE

Show me the family which exists, which claims it never had a spat, and I'll say — baloney!

Mama and Papa insist they always lived like teibelakh (pigeons). But when I mention the innumerable times they almost killed each other, Papa laughs it aside and says,

"That? Just a little bit lively, that's all."

Mama swears there'd never have been a loud word between them if it hadn't been for us kids.

But, Ma, how do you figure that? How did we shine in?"

"Never mind," Mama would answer logically in all the illogic, "Papa and I agreed all the time — till you children started nagging."

"When you did something he didn't like — and I approved — he'd get mad and say,

"Sure, your mother brings you up without any respect for your father."

"So that was one of his cues. Of course, it wasn't true. So I should let him insult me? He shouted, I shouted back, then he tried to shout me. Before you knew it, it sounded like a serial on TV."

"Then," Mama continued to reminisce, "I tried another solution. When any of you children came to me for anything, I said, 'Go ask Papa.'"

"So when you went and asked Papa, he told you, 'Go ask Mama.'"

"That's how it went — back and forth, back and forth. Until Papa got tired and began yelling, 'Must you bother me all the time?'"

"So the whole thing started over again. But I want you to know, outside of that we were like two, little doves. We had no differences, we thought alike. Only you kids would disturb the peace."

Of course, we rebelled at this sort of defense. For a long time we had no compunction in letting Mama know that, regardless of her explanation, there was constant bickering. Until Papa took sides with her and concluded,

"Life had to be a little exciting."

It reminded me of the time Mama went chasing Papa with a broom. Round and round the dining table they ran, till Papa made a dash for the door. Even that incident somehow was connected with us small fry, according to them. But what will always remain a mystery.

Today, however, I can sympathize and even feel somewhat guilty. Because now that I have a family of my own, it is apparent that history repeats itself. For instance, a little thing like, "No, you can't go down the block," from me and "What are you trying to do, make parasites out of them?" from Ned can start a conflagration.

Instead I bite my tongue and stare right into the brats' eyes. I'll be darned if I give those monsters the satisfaction of a free-for-all.

And I pray that, like Mama and Papa, Ned and I always will stick together like glue.

TORONTO SYNAGOGUES

CONTEMPORARY PAINTER
AND SCULPTOR — Otto Schneid, Czechoslovakian-born painter, sculptor, dramatist, author, who now resides in Toronto. The chief theme of Schneid's characterizations is biblical in nature. In compositions which are monumental both in huge and small sizes, the Bible overflows. Schneid depicts figures of prophets and martyrs, he invades the future, away from the catastrophe of millions of Jews and Christian victims to the nightmare of destruction of mankind together with the animal world and all organic nature. Schneid creates a group of forces that depict human misery, love, beauty and mystery, counteracted by an obvious cosmic tendency. However, he never ceases to study specific pictorial problems and to undertake researches for their solution. An exhibit of Schneid's work will open on May 8th at Toronto's Holy Blossom Temple.

Have

applied for your Social Insurance Number?

Your government is issuing Social Insurance Number Cards in place of the unemployment insurance numbers that most employed people have had until now. The new numbers will help government to use modern office methods for greater efficiency in handling unemployment insurance, and also other social benefits such as proposed pension plans. For these reasons, you are invited to apply for a Social Insurance Number, even if you are not a contributor to the unemployment insurance plan. If you haven't yet applied, here's what you do.

IF YOU ARE AN EMPLOYEE your employer will give you an application form. Fill it out and return to your employer promptly.

IF YOU ARE UNEMPLOYED and drawing benefit you will complete an application form when you report to the Unemployment Insurance Commission in person or by mail.

IF YOU ARE AN EMPLOYER registered with the Commission, you will receive application forms automatically. If NOT registered with the Commission please get in touch with your local U.I.C. office and application forms will be sent to you. Distribute application forms to your employees, have them completed and return them together, not individually, to the Commission.

INVESTORS IN ISRAEL HELPED

The Economic Department of the Jewish Agency is concerned primarily with encouraging Jews throughout the world to invest capital in Israel and facilitate settlement of Jews from the free countries who can bring their capital resources with them and thus directly stimulate economic progress. Thus the Department maintains loan funds and advisory services; it acts as an intermediary between the potential immigrant and the government departments with which it cooperates closely.

Recently it has met with increasing interest in its activities on the part of Jews in the western hemisphere. It has advised thousands of inquirers on economic issues; issued publications for potential investors and settlers; helped to establish Israel-linked Chambers of Commerce; assisted tourism and the sale of Israeli products overseas; helped immigrant families to transfer property and capital to the value of over $20 million; provided various types of constructive loans and facilitated investment in industry, agriculture and services.

As Aryeh Le.b. Dultzin, head of the Economic Department, explains: "The Fund for the Encouragement of the Middle Classes, founded in 1957 for the purpose of assisting new immigrants who had at their disposal financial means of relatively small dimensions, filled a vacuum felt for many years. Generally, absorption activities here were directed mainly for the bringing over of Jews devoid of all worldly possessions and of settling them in the country. Recently, on the other hand, certain facilities were extended to large investors from abroad, while the man of medium resources seemed to have been forgotten altogether. Such immigrant did not benefit even from the facilities extended to the person investing his money in Israel, while he and members of his family continued to remain in the Diaspora. For a long time, the middle class immigrant lacked even a central address to which he could turn for advice and guidance in time of need. He went from one government office to another, finding no one to deal with his case in an acceptable manner."

The Economic Department of the Jewish Agency, on whose initiative the Fund was established, faced a wide field of activity. It was transformed into a central address where immigrants of the middle classes might come. All members of its staff have adopted the system of individual care and treatment of applicants; results have proven most beneficial. Reality has proven that by giving immigrants proper guidance and by evincing understanding for their particular problems, one can help them to obtain some sort of livelihood, offering them an honorable subsistence during their initial states in the country. There is no doubt that the integration of the immigrants in the country is dependent of the extent and rate at which they are able to gain a foothold in it. Hence there have been no cases of "emigration" among the immigrants who were dealt with and assisted. By means of loans granted by the Fund, many have established industrial enterprises and workshops of various kinds; many others were able to expand their enterprises and now are employing considerable number of workers so that they have been able to create sources of livelihood for others. Ninety-eight percent of those who received loans repay their debts to the Fund. Emisseries of the Economic Department function in the large Jewish centers of the world; they give information and advice to the potential candidates for immigration to Israel. Representatives are specially trained and always have information on possibilities for investments and settlement in Israel. Mr. Dov Levin is the representative of the Economic Department of the Jewish Agency in Canada, with offices at the Zionist Center, Toronto.

Further, Mr. Buchanan resigned from the board of Mercury last year since when, in spite of the fact that Minsep's offices are in Warburg's building, relations have become increasingly strained. There have been attempts by Mr. Buchanan to change Minsep's merchant bank. But as a company should not change its bank without board unanimity, and as the Warburg nominees are sitting tight, a stalemate seems to have been reached.

Mr. Buchanan, seems determined to disassociate himself from Warburgs. This prospect could have an unsettling effect on the publicly quoted Vesper and Hecht, Levis and Kahn shares.

Minsep's annual meeting in June, may be a livelier affair than in previous years unless this breach can be healed; if it continues it is difficult to see who benefits.

unless legal steps are taken immediately on the federal level, the spreading of this obnoxious and obscene literature will not stop.

The recent mailings may strengthen the position of those who are demanding action against these hate-mongers. Hatemongers Still At Work The Canadian Jewish News also has received information that, notwithstanding that claims that the police is in possession of the names of the hate propaganda distributors, some individuals still are being annoyed by phone, besides receiving this kind of obscene pamphlets through the mail.

Some of our informants claim that very little is being done to actually determine the connection between the hate center south of the border and its agents here.

See Ontario—Canada's Big Vacationland

Ontario has all the bigness, all the variety for one of the most exciting vacations of your life.

First of all, Ontario covers 415,000 square miles, packed with things to see. A quarter of a million lakes are dotted through for a holiday filled with swimming, boating, fishing.

Ontario is great outdoors. And Ontario is much more. Ontario is old castles and cathedrals, art galleries and museums, scarlet-coated Mounties and powerful cannons. Ontario is the majesty of Niagara Falls, the charm of side-walk cafes.

Your Ontario is a stirring, exciting place for a vacation. Take this summer to explore.

For more information, write Ontario Department of Travel, Room 271, Parliament Bldgs., Toronto, Ontario. Literature available in English.

HONOURABLE JAMES AULD, Minister.

Infeld, Slonimski Blacklisted

LONDON, (CJN). — Wladyslaw Gomulka, the Polish Communist leader, has blacklisted 94 Polish intellectuals as a reprisal for their protest against increasingly strict censorship and restriction of intellectual freedom. They include some of Poland's best-known writers and scientists.

Among them are Prof. Leopold Infeld, a pupil of Einstein who has a world reputation as a physicist; Antoni Slonimski, Poland's foremost poet, and a grandson of the famous Hebrew editor Hayim Zelig Slonimski, former chairman of the Union of Polish Writers.

Hebrew Tradition At Massad

Along with its summer activities (swimming, waterskiing, overnight hikes, arts and crafts, music, dramatics, baseball, badminton), Camp Massad, located in Torrance, Ontario, boasts an active role in maintaining a Hebrew tradition.

The camp, which is home during July and August to boys and girls from ages 6 to 16, stresses an environment wherein elements of religion and Jewish culture, study, Hebrew language and ideals of Zionism constitute an integral part in the scheme of activities.

Sabbath is observed with services, song and study in a natural setting which creates an atmosphere of joyful Jewish living. Dietary laws are strictly enforced (under Congress kashrut supervision), food, well prepared and appetizing.

A doctor and trained nurse always are at hand in the event of emergencies.

Golf At Grossinger's

The 1964 Catskill Mountain pro-amateur golf tournament will be held on May 30th on the championship course at Grossinger Country Club, Grossinger, New York. Outstanding pros will team with guests.

An added feature will be a free golf-instruction clinic conducted by the pros.
